Target Information

Porcine calpain-2 catalytic subunit is a key component of the calpain protease system, playing a significant role in various cellular processes. It is a calcium-dependent cysteine protease that is involved in the regulation of cell signaling, cytoskeletal dynamics, and protein degradation. Calpain-2 is particularly important in modulating neuronal function and has been implicated in acute neuronal injury and neurodegeneration. The enzyme's activity is tightly regulated by calcium levels and is involved in the cleavage of multiple substrates, including transcription factors and cytoskeletal proteins, which can influence cell survival and function.
